Fetich

A post modern design featuring elegant straight lines with brilliant combination of steel & glass

A Fetich for Hi-tech life style.

At the turn of the century the kitchen is once again not only a work place but a spacious room around which the family life revolves. The modern world is returning to a tradition which has always been familiar to us. Old rural kitchens in the plains of Punjab, Sindh and other parts of our region were quite evidently places where the whole family would gather after long working days. In the up country and specially in the winter seasons it was not always a matter of choice - kitchen was the only room providing protection against the freezing cold. In Baltistan and Hunza even today they would spend the entire winter in a room that appears like a big kitchen, featuring a store, groceries, a living area and even beds in a corner.

It took a "renaissance" of lifestyles for people to realize that kitchen is the true center of their home. For years little thought was given to the interior design of this room, the ergonomic and aesthetic principles were entirely ignored. In the sixties when kitchen was the most unrepresentable room of our houses Prestige took the task of improving it; four decades later we are proud to say that kitchen has reemerged as the most important room in every home.
